Site Context

Triple C Business Park — aerial view showing campus layout and surrounding South Lubbock corridor

South Lubbock Growth Corridor

South Lubbock has emerged as the city's primary growth frontier for industrial and flex commercial uses. The completion of Loop 88 has fundamentally altered the accessibility equation for businesses in this corridor, creating a logistics-friendly environment previously unavailable outside the city's northern and eastern quadrants. Traffic counts along 118th Street and the surrounding arterials continue to increase year-over-year as residential development pushes southward, creating a built-in customer base for service-oriented tenants.

Lubbock's commercial real estate fundamentals remain strong: the metropolitan statistical area has demonstrated consistent population growth driven by Texas Tech University, a diversified energy sector, and healthcare expansion. Vacancy rates for quality flex/industrial product remain tight, making Triple C Business Park's new inventory particularly timely for businesses seeking modern, purpose-built facilities.
